FLC Photo of the Week

Photo of the Week:

A member of the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory's Weapons and Complex Integration team adjusts the TME3D "snout" hardware. The development of new snouts, such as the CryoXNBS for megajoule class fusion neutron environments, enables new capabilities for survivability experiments.

FLC 2025 Awards

A graphic for the FLC 2025 Awards. On the left, there is a close-up of a trophy with text: "2024 Excellence in Technology Transfer Award", "National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases", "Changing Lives in HIV/AIDS: Pathways, Disease Discovery and Treatment", and "50 FLC CELEBRATING 50 YEARS OF INNOVATION". On the right, the FLC logo is displayed with the text "Federal Laboratory Consortium for Technology Transfer". Below the logo, the text "SUBMIT FOR AN FLC 2025 AWARD" is written in large, bold letters, followed by the tagline "Celebrating the best in technology transfer" in a smaller, italicized font.

FLC Spotlights

Did you know? Offloading heavy equipment on ocean shores without fixed ports is slow and difficult due to soft sand and waves. SUBMAT (Submersible Matting System) solves this with a portable, sand-filled mat that provides a stable surface for military vehicles. Developed under an innovative agreement between the Department of Defense and Shavers-Whittle Construction, SUBMAT installs quickly and leaves no environmental footprint, promising broader applications in emergency access and commercial operations. Learn more here.

Spread the news and share your T2 success through Labs in Action and FLC Awards.
