2022 FLC NATIONAL MEETING

About the FLC:

The Federal Laboratory Consortium for Technology Transfer facilitates sharing of knowledge and technologies across federal laboratories as well as federal research and innovation with non-governmental public and private entities to benefit the wider economy.

About the FLC National Meeting:

The FLC National Meeting will center on our nation's continued focus to move federal research and innovation out of the lab and into the marketplace by strengthening relationships within the private sector — a process called technology transfer.

What to expect:

- Training: The FLC offers a full day of training designed to meet the professional development requirements of all T2 professionals — from novices to experienced practitioners. This year's training day features a variety of courses from a T2 overview for beginners to in-depth, advanced workshops.
- Meeting Sessions: With an array of prominent expert tech transfer speakers and an agenda that covers topics ranging from federal lab commercialization to licensing and litigation strategy, the FLC National Meeting offers informative sessions that appeal to a business and technology R&D audience.
- Networking: Each day, the National Meeting provides ample time for sharing and strategizing technology transfer best practices, as well as a significant opportunity to network with laboratory and agency representatives, small and medium business enterprises, and start-ups to discover technology needs and form potential partnerships.

Why Sponsor?

- Showcase your products and services, and meet with the nation's top federal scientists, engineers, inventors, researchers and technology transfer professionals.
- Connect with a highly targeted decision-making market, including federal technology transfer professionals across all government branches — DoD, NIH, DOE, USDA, NOAA, NASA, DHS and more!
